At the start of Jean Paul's life, his father abandoned him. Jean Paul felt the big...

Lost. He didn't know where his father was or why he had left. He felt like he had lost a part of himself.

Sartre (one-act play): At the start of Jean-Paul's life, his father "abandoned" him. Jean-Paul felt the "big empty" (MUEHLBERG EXISTENTIALISM) by Richard L Muehlberg

Alone. He didn't have anyone to talk to about what he was going through. He felt like he was the only person in the world who had ever felt this way.

Hurt. He felt like his father didn't love him. He felt like he wasn't good enough.

Pain. He felt a physical pain in his chest. He felt like he couldn't breathe.

Sorrow. He felt a deep sadness. He felt like he would never be happy again.

Grief. He felt like he had lost a loved one. He felt like he would never get over his father's abandonment.

But Jean Paul didn't give up. He didn't let his father's abandonment define him. He found the strength to heal and recover.

He found hope in the love of his mother and his friends. He found love in his own heart.

He learned to forgive his father. He learned to accept that his father's abandonment was not his fault.

He learned to love himself. He learned to believe in himself.

Jean Paul's story is a story of hope. It is a story of healing and recovery. It is a story of love.

If you have been abandoned by your father, know that you are not alone. Know that there is hope. Know that you can heal and recover.

You can find strength in the love of your family and friends. You can find love in your own heart.

You can forgive your father. You can accept that his abandonment was not your fault.

You can love yourself. You can believe in yourself.

You can heal from the pain of abandonment. You can find happiness again.

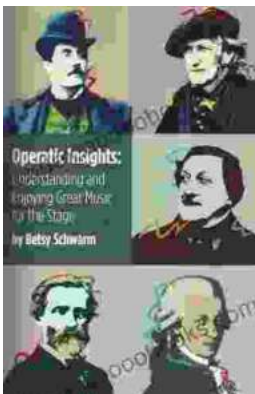

Jean Paul's story is a testament to the power of the human spirit. It is a story of hope, healing, and love.
