As Cara delves deeper into her therapeutic journey, she is confronted by the shadows of her past. Flashbacks transport her to a childhood marked by loss and abuse, forcing her to confront the demons that have haunted her for years. With courage and determination, she faces these painful memories head-on.

Art becomes Cara's sanctuary, a transformative realm where she finds solace and expression. Through painting and writing, she processes her complex emotions, giving them shape and meaning. Akers' descriptions of Cara's artistic creations are vivid and evocative, inviting readers into the healing power of creativity.

Cara's journey is not without its setbacks and moments of despair. Yet, through the support of her loved ones and the transformative power of art, she slowly begins to heal. She learns to accept her flaws, embrace her strengths, and forge a path towards a more fulfilling life.

As the novel draws to a close, Cara emerges from her struggles with a newfound appreciation for the complexities of life. She has learned to process her emotions with grace and resilience, understanding that the human experience is often a tapestry of joy, sorrow, and everything in between.

"A moving and deeply resonant exploration of trauma, resilience, and the transformative power of connection." - Celeste Ng

"Processing Things" is not merely a novel; it is an immersive experience that invites readers to reflect on their own emotional landscapes. Ellery Akers has crafted a literary masterpiece that will resonate with anyone who has ever grappled with the complexities of the human condition. This thought-provoking and unforgettable novel is a must-read for seekers of truth, redemption, and the enduring power of the human spirit.
