A Historic Haven on the Shores of Lake Michigan

Nestled on a windswept bluff overlooking the vast expanse of Lake Michigan, Wind Point Lighthouse has stood as a guiding light for over a century, witnessing the passage of time and the ever-changing moods of the Great Lake. Its origins can be traced back to 1839, when the United States government recognized the need for a lighthouse at this perilous point on the lake's southern shore.

In 1859, the first lighthouse was constructed, a modest structure that served as a beacon for mariners navigating the treacherous waters of Lake Michigan. However, as the number of ships traversing the lake increased, so did the demand for a more substantial and reliable light. In 1880, the original lighthouse was replaced by the iconic structure that stands today, a stately white tower with a distinctive red roof.

The Keepers of the Light

Throughout its history, Wind Point Lighthouse has been tended by a dedicated group of lighthouse keepers and their families, who played a vital role in maintaining the light and ensuring the safety of mariners. They faced countless challenges, from fierce storms to icy winters, but their unwavering commitment to their duty never wavered.

One of the most notable lighthouse keepers was Captain Edward H. Hamilton, who served at Wind Point for over 20 years. Under his leadership, the lighthouse became a model of efficiency and reliability, earning recognition for its exceptional service to Great Lakes shipping.

A Living Legacy: The Wind Point Lighthouse Today

In 1976, Wind Point Lighthouse was decommissioned and replaced by an automated light. However, its legacy as a historic landmark and a symbol of the indomitable spirit of the lighthouse keepers remained. In 1992, the lighthouse was meticulously restored and opened to the public as a museum and bed and breakfast.

Today, Wind Point Lighthouse invites visitors to explore its fascinating history, learn about the lives of the lighthouse keepers, and experience the breathtaking beauty of its surroundings. The museum features exhibits on the history of the lighthouse, the lighthouse keepers, and the natural environment of the area. Visitors can also climb to the top of the lighthouse tower for panoramic views of Lake Michigan and the surrounding countryside.
